

HOMES & GARDENS®

5 vintage furniture trends to look out for in 2024, according to designers

These vintage furniture trends will add plenty of personality to your home, say interior designers

4. RATTAN, BAMBOO, AND WOVEN FURNITURE

(Image credit: Imparfait Design Studio)

If soft, relaxed furniture is more your style, vintage pieces made from natural woven materials are on-trend and suit a variety of interiors. 'It's been ramping up for a while now, but I'm seeing more rattan, reed, and bamboo furniture popping up in homes. I've been a sucker for it as long as I can remember, being so influenced by the boho chic and disco glam smashup of the late 70's,' says Rebekah Zaveloff, founder and creative director at Imparfait Design Studio.

The increased desire for spaces that feel tranquil and relaxing tailors perfectly to this style of vintage furniture – from California casual to Mediterranean designs, these natural woods are key to creating the atmosphere these spaces are renowned for. 'I think rattan and woven furniture is proving popular because it adds instant warmth and texture to a space, and a sense of bringing a more relaxed, vacation vibe into our homes,' adds Rebekah.

Rattan and bamboo pieces can be easily incorporated into a space and depending on the decor it's paired with, you can create a truly tailored scheme. 'You'll see a little rattan making a cameo in all our projects – from woven tables mixed with sleek brass frame lounge chairs to a vintage rattan daybed that creates a cozy spot in a primary bathroom. I use it anytime I can,' says Rebekah. 'I love mixing it with more glam elements, like rattan paired with brass metal leg details and Murano glass lighting fixtures,' she adds.

HOMES & GARDENS®

What are the most timeless interior design styles? Interior designers list their favorite classics

Trends come and go, but there are 10 core timeless interior design styles that are consistently fabulous

5. BOHEMIAN

With a nod to the seventies, bohemian interior style is about really choosing what you love, over what you think you should have.

'For us, 'bohemian' is more of a state of mind or approach to decorating than it is a prescribed design style – it's about being open and trusting your intuition when it comes to making choices about your space, and not being afraid to mix high and low, modern and traditional, and a variety of materials,' advises Rebekah Zaveloff, co-founder and creative director of Imparfait Design.

Think decorating with vintage, retro artwork and artisanal accessories – this look is as personal as they come and unique to you, Rebekah agrees: 'To lean into your inner bohemian, use as much vintage furniture and accessories as possible; you can guarantee that only a few others will have the same items you have. Use a mix of vintage-inspired brass, gold leaf and silver leaf frames for your artwork. It adds instant patina and age, even with more modern art. And of course, vintage rugs are a no-brainer. Bohemian design is highly personal and for that reason alone, it will never go out of style because it was never trendy to begin with.'